The introductory course in the principles of economics provides a broad overview of microeconomics and macroeconomics. The goal of the course is to develop your critical thinking and analytical abilities, as well as to understand economic principles and how they relate to the world around us.

Students enrolling in the course will benefit from the course's focus on the application of economic theory to real-world issues. The course will also provide a strong foundation for the advanced courses in the field, and will help you to understand the role of government in the economy and how it affects the lives of citizens.

The first module introduces students to the difference between microeconomics and macroeconomics, highlighting the role of the individual in the economy. The second module covers the theory of supply and demand, and the role of the market in determining prices. The third module covers the theory of production and cost, and the role of the firm in the economy. The fourth module covers the theory of consumer choice, and the role of the household in the economy.
